The standing committees reported progress. The report of the Committee on Insurance was submitted, and set the amount for which the buildings and other property should be insured at $100,000. The report was adopted. The Board then went into secret session.

Amusements.

WOOD'S THEATER.—The "Sea of Ice" with Mr. and Mrs. Macauley in the leading roles is a very attractive performance. It is handsomely mounted, the second and third tableaux, especially, being skillfully devised and arranged so as to give a most realistic effect. The parts are all appropriately sustained. The play will be repeated this evening. The popular comedy, "Old Heads and Young Hearts," is the bill for Mrs. Macauley's benefit on Friday evening next.

THE ORPHANS' FESTIVAL.—There will be a matinee at Robinson's Opera-house this afternoon in the series of entertainments for the benefit of St. Peter and St. Joseph's Orphan Asylum. The performance will consist of musical and elocutionary exercises by the orphans. The programme for the evening's entertainment will be a drama entitled "Calocation," to be presented by the "Calocation Dramatic Club," followed by the humorous farce, "A Close Shave," together with songs and dances and banjo solos by Messrs. Nicholson and Griffin.

RIVER NEWS.

THE weather to-day is cloudy and cold, although a few degrees warmer than yesterday, with a prospect for snow during the next 24 hours.

THE river has fallen 2 feet and 3 inches since our last report; 27 feet 10 inches to-day and falling.

Business quiet along the levee to-day. The following boats arrived to-day from Pittsburgh with coal tons: My Choice, Oriand, Coal Valley, Coal Hill, Alice Brown and Stella.

THE John A. Babage, which left here a few days ago for St. Louis, only went as far as Cairo, where she laid up her tow on account of low water and ice in the Mississippi river.

I never could believe that Providence sent a few men into the world, ready booted and spurred to ride, and millions ready saddled and bridled to be ridden. —Richard Bumbold, when on the sea-field, 1855.

THE MERCHANTS' LIBRARY.

The Result of Yesterday's Election.

The election of yesterday was the all-absorbing theme of the day. The polls opened promptly at one o'clock, at the Merchants' Exchange and the Library, and the scramble for votes commenced. The day grew shorter the good-natured fight was hotter, and by six o'clock had worked up to almost a white heat, and at seven, at the close of the polls, resulted in a complete fusion of the two parties in relation to the choice. Indeed, so evenly conducted had been the fight that no one seemed at all surprised at the result, which gave about the same honors to both parties, and certainly no one can be dissatisfied, for a better choice would have been very difficult to make.

While those elected have the fact of their election to congratulate them, lives upon those defeated have the consolation of knowing that the majority by which they were defeated was so small as to be rather a compliment than otherwise. There were about 1,500 votes cast, and a good deal of scratching was done. The ballot papers grew highly impatient before the result was announced a few minutes before 12 o'clock. The result of the count was showing that the Independents had elected the President, Corresponding and Recording Secretaries and one Director.

The names of the officers elected are as follows:

President—W. J. Arnel, (I.)

Vice President—A. H. Mitchell, (R.)

Corresponding Secretary—Charles B. Murray, (I.)

Recording Secretary—John J. Woods, (I.)

Treasurer—J. M. Wayne Neff, (R.)

Directors—Samuel F. Hunt, (I.), Herman Goepfer, (R.), George F. Harrison, (R.), Wm. H. Hinkle, (R.), Jos. W. Wilshire, (R.)

For President there were 1,500 votes cast with a majority of 64 for Mr. Arnel, while in the other cases the majorities ranged from 28 to 200, the highest majority received by any one of the officers elected being given, Mr. John J. Woods, the candidate for Recording Secretary on the Independent ticket. His majority was 213, and while a handsome compliment to him, especially as being gained in a race against so excellent a gentleman, is justly a deserved one, and one which will be fully appreciated by his many friends.

The annual report of the Directors showed the membership to be 2359.

The report of the Directors spoke very highly of the Librarian, Mr. Hazen White and Misses McLean and Gaither assistants, saying: "The board takes pleasure in reporting them perfectly competent for their various duties, and express its high regard for the faithful manner in which they have performed them."

During the year the circulation has been as follows:

Novels taken from the Library.....40,407

Novels consulted in Library.....11,857

Miscellaneous books taken from Library.....1,183

Miscellaneous books consulted in Library, 4,189

Total.....57,636

Eleven hundred and eighty-four volumes have been added during the year. By purchase, $307; by donation, $32; by binding magazines and newspapers, 139. Of the gross number 194 volumes are duplicates, and are not numbered.

The report of the Treasurer is as follows:

McArthur Fund.....$1,718.74

Endowment Fund.....4,520.00

Total.....$6,238.74

The report of the Treasurer is as follows:

Total receipts to be.....$17,081.61

Expenses.....10,161.44

Balance in Treasury.....$6,920.17

GOSSIP.

A man may grow to weigh a ton who feasts his mind with pungent fun; But he who scorns its simple sway, 'Till yields to crime an easy prey.

"Yeth, thir, if you wou' eat me," was the trembling reply of a chubby little boy whom King Kalakaua took up in his arms, and asked for a kiss, in the corridor of San Francisco hotel.

When a boy is sitting on the sunny side of a horse-barn waiting for his father to come home and "lick" him, you might talk astronomy to him for four straight hours and not excite his interest.

The Brooklyn Argus remarks that "there are those who may have noticed how suddenly the truly considerate man will leave church when he sees the plate coming round, and walk home in a blinding snow-storm, that he may yield the seat in his carriage to some infirm sister."

Thackeray tells us of a woman begging alms from him, when she saw him put his hands in his pocket, cried out: "May the blessings of God follow you all your life!" But when he only pulled out his snuff-box, she immediately added, "And never overtake ye!"

A voter in Vermont after the recent election said he "had voted every darned election, but the constitutional commandments, except the last one, he never did know much about commandments anyhow."

A Chicago Alderman tried for three hours to think of George Washington's last name, but he couldn't do it. He said he knew it was George, and the man had something to do with the Mexican war, but he couldn't remember further.

It was a woman—Elizabeth, Countess of Thanet—who first petitioned the Irish Government for a penny-post. This was 173 years ago. Subsequently, for that valuable act, she was awarded a pension of £300 per annum.

The addition of a small quantity of glycerine to the grease used for leather articles exposed to the ammoniacal exhalations of horse stables is said to have the desirable effect of keeping them soft and pliable.

The Tunnel Under the British Channel.

The long-vaunted project for a channel tunnel uniting England and France, is now coming into practicable shape. Rothschild has put in his money; Michael Chevalier, the original of the Anglo-French Commercial Treaty, has given political influence; Leon Say is to work the social aspect of the undertaking; and Lavalley, who did all the difficult work on the Suez Canal, has all his plans ready for circumventing the worst freaks of father Neptune. The total cost is to be $30,000,000, equal to $1,000,000 per mile, and the tunnel is to be 100 miles long. The preliminary shafts will cost $800,000, which sum is now ready to begin with. The line to be traversed by the tunnel crosses the Channel from Westenerger, between Dover and Faiskton, in England, to Cape Griznez, which lies midway between Boulogne and Calais, in France. Here the two coasts are but twenty miles apart, and the vast body of water is suddenly compressed from the one hundred miles of its western breadth into this small space. Hence the short sea voyage is always a rough one, and as Calais and Boulogne have a poor harbor, no large steamers can be used. The engineers propose to leave two hundred and fifty feet of solid earth between the bed of the channel and the roof of the tunnel, so that the depth of the lowest portion will be about two thousand feet. This heavy downward grade will necessitate the construction of approaches five miles long on each side. It is remarkable that the engineers do not ask for any government grant or guarantee, and that they only want a concession for thirty years instead of the ninety-nine usually given. The carrying out of this stupendous work will facilitate the intercourse between two wealthy countries, and it is a comfort to see so stupendous an enterprise based on commercial principles and not on national subsidies.

Educational Reforms!

THE LYCEUM INSTITUTE will render more facile and entirely practicable certain reforms which are desirable in the methods of common school instruction. It will either partially or wholly dispense with certain branches that now consume half the time of pupils between the ages of eight and fifteen years.

For example, consider Geography and English Grammar. "What!" exclaim the whole world, "Are not Geography and Grammar to be taught in the Lyceum Institute?" Yes, verily—and with ten-fold more thoroughness and in one-tenth part the time. It will show that nearly all the time now spent in Geography is wasted. How many commence this study at eight years of age, and at from twelve to sixteen years of age exit from the schools carrying away with them their geographical text-books!

How will it be in the Lyceum Institute? Listen: History will hold so important a place in its course of study that there will be no necessity for Geography as a specialty, because it is a necessary part of History; and the atlas will not be much more in requisition by those who never studied Geography than by those who have wasted several years of valuable time upon it. Learned in connection with History, Geography is interesting, because the pupils see the purpose and utility of it. This method renders it convenient to furnish every text-book of History with suitable maps—as, indeed, should be the case with all historical works.

We claimed some credit for originality in this until recently in looking over the English "Monthly Review or Literary Journal" for the year 1790 we found a review of "Lectures on Education, read to a Society for promoting reasonable and humane Improvements in the Discipline and Instruction of youth, by the Rev. David Williams, in three volumes, 8vo, pp. 940, 1788." Mr. Williams was an experienced and an original instructor of youth. Among the new methods in both instruction and discipline he introduced, was one for teaching Geography. He found, however, that in his method it was "difficult to avoid the elements of history." He was, however, led into the observation by an incident, which he relates, and which the review says contains "peculiar hints toward a new plan." Mr. Williams says:

"A gentleman who had gone through a course of polite education in England, and had been many years secretary to an embassy, applied to me for assistance in the execution of particular views, in which geographical knowledge was necessary. He had traversed a great part of Europe, and was an excellent linguist; he was unacquainted with the use of a globe, when I prepared for considering the divisions of the earth as the habitations of men, having relations to each other, he suggested the propriety of connecting the description with general history, which should commence with the fabulous origin or settlement of men, and trace them on its surface, in their emigrations, policies and contentions. I knew no such history; he, therefore, obliged me to invent a substitute; and we traced traditions or histories, according to my information, from the banks of the Ganges and Euphrates, in every direction over the globe. I have suggested the method to parents and teachers in Geography; and they have furnished themselves with hints in writing, which have rendered their conversation with pupils the best introduction to universal history."

As a discipline of the memory English Grammar can be profitably dispensed with, because the grammar of any other language comprehends English Grammar, and a fair knowledge of Latin and Greek can be obtained in the time now wasted on English Grammar. The differences in the grammars of languages are chiefly in the inflections; and the differences between the Latin and the English should be a matter of incidental attention by the teacher. This would make the pupils much better English grammarians than they ever become under the old method, and without having spent any time upon the study of English Grammar, and with having acquired one or two other languages. Pupils should commence the study of Latin and Greek at seven or eight years of age.

How foolish is the wide-spread hostility to the study of the "dead languages." They are the foundation of our vernacular speech, and are so mixed up with literature, philosophy, history, and all the sciences that no one should be satisfied without some knowledge of them. The method of the Lyceum Institute shows how this knowledge can be obtained without loss of either time or money, and at the same time secure a far more thorough knowledge of one's own tongue.

Older pupils who have not fully studied English Grammar will study Latin and Greek or French and German, as they may choose, or all together, in order to learn English; and the Lyceum Exercises will hasten their progress in English by bringing the principles of Grammar as well as of Rhetoric and Logic into practical use.
